Exhibit and Guided Pontoon Boat Tour
The Nature Center’s exhibit hall includes a 10-minute video presentation and a series of interactive displays that explain West Lake Park’s mangrove ecosystem and its significance. The Nature Center also offers a 40-seat pontoon boat tour of the mangrove forests.

Observation Tower and Nature Trails
The Anne Kolb Complex offers:
• Observation Tower - A 68-foot structure overlooking the estuary, the Intracoastal Waterway, and the Atlantic Ocean.
• Lake Observation Trail - A 0.2-mile trail leading to a covered area on West Lake.
• Fishing Pier Trail - A 783-foot trail leading to 2 fishing spots along the Intracoastal Waterway.
• Mud Flat Trail - A 0.3-mile trail that includes spots for viewing resident and migratory birds.
• South Trail - A 2.3-mile gravel trail with two gazebos, one with a great view of the Intracoastal Waterway.

The Nature Center offers a 40-seat pontoon boat tour of the mangrove forests.

The Anne Kolb Nature Center Complex.

The Anne Kolb Nature Center is named after a journalist, who, in 1974, had become the first woman elected to the Broward County Commission. Anne is known for leading the fight for the 1977 Land Use Plan that tightened government control over future developments by placing a building moratorium on 61,000 acres Broward County. She also proposed an Urban Wilderness Park System to preserve endangered species for future generations.

The Great White Egret is from the Ardeidae family that has existed for at least 55 million years.

The Anne Kolb Nature Center finally opened on February 10, 1996 to provide a home to a wide variety of plants and animals, including threatened and endangered species.

In 1990, the plans for a 1,500 acre coastal West Lake Park received a prestigious Take Pride in America Award that was presented in a ceremony at the George H. W. Bush White House Rose Garden.

The Nature Center’s pontoon boat seats 40 people.

Fossil fuel boats are not permitted in the open waters and on the paddling trails of West Lake. The Nature Center is part of the Great Florida Birding and Wildlife Trail.
