<td>The Bimini Road, sometimes thought to be a wall, pier, breakwater, or other man-made structure, was discovered on September 2, 1968. The road is one half mile long, it has been investigated by geologists, archaeologists, and marine engineers—and generated controversy due to many underwater anomalies.</td>

- Mohenjo Daro, Indus Valley that would explain the Taj Mahal, Agra India
- Minoan Civilization that would explain:
  - Great Pyramid at Giza
  - Stonehenge, England
  - Gobekli Tepe in Southeast Turkey
  - Akrotiri on the Island of Santorini
- Aroi Sun Kingdom of the Pacific that would explain the Moai human figures at Easter Island, Polynesia
- Yax Mutal in northern Guatemala that would explain
- Machu Picchu in Peru
- Chichen Itza in the Yucatan Peninsula, Mexico
- Han China that would explain the Great Wall of China
- Mississippi River Valley that would explain the Monks Platform Mound, Cahokia, Illinois

The two that have archaeological sites with advanced plumbing include Mohenjo Daro, Indus Valley and Akrotiri in the Minoan Civilization—located in the Mediterranean. |
