Hi,

After I completed my 13-page letter to you, I watched television and I have some stories to relay. My first story is about a film called Just Like Heaven (2005) with Reese Witherspoon and Mark Ruffalo. It’s a romantic comedy produced by Steven Spielberg.

Spiral in the Roof Garden

In Just Like Heaven, Mark Ruffalo plays a landscape architect who sublets Reese Witherspoon’s apartment while recovering from the loss of his wife. Reese Witherspoon plays an emergency medical doctor who is in a coma after a car accident. Her family sublets her apartment to Mark Ruffalo and he becomes romantically involved with her spirit who appears in her apartment. Her apartment is located in San Francisco in a building with private roof access where Mark Ruffalo’s character creates a garden. Near the end of the film, Reese’s character discovers the garden that has a yellow brick road-like spiral in the middle. As the camera zooms in on the spiral, I wondered if the direction is to the left like the yellow brick road in MGM’s Wizard of Oz.
Oz (1939). A still photo of the Just Like Heaven spiral revealed that the direction is to the right and not the left.

As you probably know, The Wizard of Oz is a film adaptation of writer L. Frank Baum’s novel called The Wonderful Wizard of Oz (1900). In 1990, actor John Ritter played Baum in a film called The Dreamer of Oz: The L. Frank Baum Story. I found a photo of John Ritter standing in front of Baum’s portrait. As you probably know, Kaley Cuoco worked with John Ritter in the sitcom 8 Simple Rules. Kaley’s success in The Big Bang Theory and her work on commercials (Toyota and Priceline) is most likely due to her Sirian genetics. I don’t think the group who gestures their bloodline were born on Earth.

Baum’s Novel Called The Last Egyptian: A Romance of the Nile

Baum also wrote a novel called The Last Egyptian: A Romance of the Nile that was published anonymously in 1908. The book was published with Baum’s name in July 2002 (probably because of the growing numbers of Sirians migrating to Earth). One of the characters in Baum’s novel is an Egyptian named Kāra who claims to be a descendent of Ahtka-Rā, High Priest of Āmen, whom he says ruled Rameses II as his puppet. According to Wikipedia, Amen (also spelled Amun) was a major Ancient Egyptian deity. As you know, the word “Amen” is found in Jewish, Christian, and Muslim worship as a concluding word or response to prayers! Characters in family shows such as The Waltons and Little House on the Prairie recite “Amen.” There’s also Sidney Portier’s famous “Amen” song in the film Lilies of the Field (1963). Famous Black celebrities are Sirian. Sirian photos I’ve collected include Sidney Portier, Denzel Washington, Nat King Cole, Magic Johnson, John Lewis (civil rights leader), Andrew Young (civil rights leader), Chris Rock, Kerry Washington, Jada Pinkett Smith, Jaden Smith, Michelle Obama, Malia Obama, Regina King, Jermaine Jackson, Jesse Jackson, Jr., and Spike Lee.
Sirius on the Hallmark Channel

When the film Just Like Heaven concluded, I watched a Signed Sealed Delivered movie titled “The Impossible Dream” about an American soldier named Randilynn Amidon who is missing in action in Afghanistan. The dead letter office characters work to decode a letter the soldier managed to send from Afghanistan. Work on the letter occurs during the same time Rita participates in the national Miss Special Delivery pageant. Near the end of the film, there’s a night scene that’s supposed to be in Afghanistan. The soldier is looking up at a bright star in the sky while you hear a pageant contestant sing “The Impossible Dream.” When I heard:

To follow that star
No matter how hopeless
No matter how far

I thought WOW, that’s Sirius! I Googled “The Impossible Dream To follow that star sirius.” A link to the International Starseed Network was returned! The page contains posts from Web visitors and someone posted the lyrics to “The Impossible Dream.”

Signed Sealed Delivered has an ensemble cast that includes Eric Mabius as Oliver O’Toole, Kristin Booth as Shane McInerney, Crystal Lowe as Rita Haywith, and Geoff Gustafson as Norman Dorman. The series also has high-profile guest stars such as Valerie Bertinelli, Carol Burnett, Valerie Harper, Marilu Henner, and Della Reese.

I Googled the words famous songs with the word star and found a blog called “The Vigilant Citizen” with a page that says the theme song of the movie Pinocchio is also an ode to Sirius.

When you wish upon a star
Makes no difference who you are
Anything your heart desires will come to you
The ranker.com list of “The Best Songs About Stars” includes the Star Spangled Banner and Elton John’s “Goodbye Yellow Brick Road.”

“Magical” Characters
In 1937, Walt Disney Studios released its animated feature film, Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs. The Snow White, Sleeping Beauty, Cinderella, Hansel and Gretel, Rapunzel, and Puss in Boots stories were published in the 19th century (by the Brothers Grimm), but originated in 17th century Italy and earlier. A version of Cinderella can be traced to the 1st century B.C. The story of Rhodopis, as told by a Greek historian named Strabo (63 or 64 B.C. to 24 A.D.) is about a Greek slave girl who marries the king of Egypt.

Disney adds magic and supernatural powers to animated features even when they are not in the original story. For example, Pinocchio (1940), based on the children’s novel The Adventures of Pinocchio, created in 1883 by Italian writer Carlo Collodi, saw the introduction of a blue fairy that has power over Pinocchio’s nose. Disney’s Aladin (1992) is based on The Book of One Thousand and One Nights (also known as The Arabian Nights) that originated in Mesopotamia,
Egypt, Persia and India. The Arabian Nights is thought to be from 3,100 B.C. The original stories did not have magical elements. A Freemason named Antoine Galland added the famous ‘magical characters’— Sinbad, Aladdin and Ali Baba to the original Arabic manuscript in translations that appeared between 1704 and 1717.

Freemasons have used children’s stories and comedy to introduce magic in books, film, television and commercials for more than 300 years.

Earth is dominated by an advanced race and most people are asleep.

Sincerely,
